

Pointers in C

A pointer is a variable that stores the memory address of another variable. Pointers are declared using the * symbol and initialized using the address operator &.

Pointers allow direct access to memory, dynamic memory allocation, efficient handling of arrays, and passing variables by reference to functions.

They are very important in system programming and memory management.